In Beijing-based artist Cao Fei's zombie film, Haze and Fog, a pregnant woman in a polka dot dress dances in grocery store aisles and a young delivery man drops and breaks a watermelon in a slick apartment hallway. Later, the same delivery man returns with a box full of bouncy balls that look like watermelons, drops all those too, then leaves. A biker hit by a car becomes a listless-seeming zombie. All the vignettes in the film, showing at the Mistake Room, are eerily compelling, whether you do or don't sit through the film's 45-minute duration.
